The estimates have been kept down to a minimum, and only by the strictest economy can expenditures be kept within the estimates. The amounts required for another allowance, old-age pensions, poor relief and hospital deficit are mounting from year to year and it now takes a tax of 5 mills to take care of these items.

The tax rate for the current year has been set at 14 mills for municipal purposes and 18 mills for school purposes, making a total of 32 mills.

Wedding of Much Interest.

Miss Laura Liesemer Married to Mr. Jack Pearson Last Thursday.

An interesting wedding took place in Didsbury last Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock, when Laura Pauline, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Liesemer, became the bride of Mr. Jack Gerald Pearson, of Oilsun, of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Pearson, of Carstairs. Rev. H. J. Wood performed the ceremony, which took place in the Evangelical Church. Bows of satin ribbon marked the guest pews, and roses, sweet peas and fern formed a delightful setting.

The bride was a graceful figure in her gown of white lace over heavy white satin, with ruffles of tulle, and her long embroidered tulle veil was worn cap fashion. She carried a bouquet of Talsman roses. She entered the church on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage, while Miss Evelyn Liesemer played Mendelssohn's "Wedding March." The bride was accompanied by her sister, Miss Orpha Liesemer, who wore blue satin fashioned on becoming lines, with small French flowers dotting the tulle ruffles of her skirt, and carried an arm bouquet of deep pink roses. Little Joyce Teplitz, of Rossland, B.C., made a dainty flower girl.

The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. Charles Pearson, and the ushers were Dr. H. C. Liesemer, brother of the bride, and Mr. Clinton Reiber. Miss Evelyn Liesemer played the wedding music, and accompanied Mrs. H. J. Wood, who sang "Love Came Calling," the "cello obligato" being played by Mrs. Mac Stader Campbell.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Madame Butterly roses centred the prettily appointed table, where Mrs. G. Liesemer and Mrs. Kallbesh, of Three Hills, presided at the treat, and ices were cut by Mrs. H. Liesemer, of Carstairs, and Mrs. J. V. Berscht. Assisting in the serving were Mrs. H. M. Reiber, Mrs. Reider, Mrs. Reizel, Miss Ellen Pearson, Miss Ruth Liesemer, Miss Florence Reiber,

St. Paul's Lutheran Church at Westcott celebrates the 25th anniversary of its organization Sunday next, August 7th. Two services will be held, a German service at 10:30 a.m. in the church and an English service at 2:30 p.m. in Mr. Bode's grove, one mile south of the church. Rev. F. W. Falkenroth, of Beatrice, Neb., who served this congregation during the years 1908-1910 will preach at both services.

The first Lutheran services in this vicinity were held sometime in the spring of the year 1906 by Missionary R. V. George J. Wood in the Baptist Church. Mr. Meyer is now pastor in Bristol, Conn. Then came Rev. Walter Albrecht, now professor at the Concordia Theological Seminary, Springfield, Ill., and during his time the congregation was organized.

On December 4th, 1907 the present constitution was submitted by Mr. Wm. Dugdale and accepted. The charter members are: Mr. Wm. Dugdale, who is still a member of this congregation; Mr. Martin A. Krebs, who is now a member of St. John's Ev. Lutheran Church, Didsbury; Mr. John Dugdale, and Mr. E. H. Hildebrandt.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dugdale and family, and Mrs. Emma Schoenrock and her daughters Edith and Lydia motored all the way from Los Angeles to attend the celebration. Mr. E. W. Dugdale and Mr. Schinnerman, both children of Mr. Wm. Dugdale, were members of the first confirmation class. Other former members and friends of the congregation are expected to attend the celebration.

Miss Leeta Kallbesh, Miss Kathleen Kallbesh, Mrs. Mac Stader Campbell and Miss Evelyn Liesemer played during the afternoon.

Restoring World Confidence.

The signing of the Locarno treaty on July 9 by all the great European powers, whereby all the German war reparations were wiped out and provided that Germany shall pay in one lump sum or amount which represents payment for every dollar demanded by the Allies after the close of the war, marks a new and an important forward step in the direction of establishing the peace of the world and in restoring the economic health of all nations.

Apert altogether from the specific agreements set forth in this historical document, and the gains thereby conferred upon a long suffering world, the fact that the great European powers, and more especially Germany and France, have at last met on common ground, and have signed a treaty as a result of consultation and compromise rather than as one forced by one upon the other, is one of the most hopeful occurrences for many years.

Since the signing of the Peace Treaty, and the imposition of a war indemnity on Germany totalling the huge and impossible sum of $5,000,000,000, together with many other humiliations and penalties, nothing but bitter feelings have prevailed on the continent of Europe. Financial warfare has been fanned by an ever increasing economic warfare; fortifications and armed force trench entrenchments, armaments and machine guns have been accelerated by a high and ever higher tariff barriers. Each nation has been determined to give as little trade interference with its neighbors as possible; each was endeavoring to economically strangle the other. Each was suspicious of and feared the other. Each demanded security from the others. Thus Europe was desolated, trade stagnated, all people suffered, and warlike armaments steadily increased despite all efforts to reduce and control them.

So as many international "conversations" took place between various nations, international conference followed conference with all its tangible results being achieved until confidence in the world's political leaders, even in our existing institutions of government, was more or less shaken. Even in Western Canada leaders of certain parties and groups openly predicted the failure of this last Locarno conference. This loss of confidence was, in fact, the world's greatest loss because it was shattering all hopes of success and a way out of our difficulties being found.

The signing of the Locarno treaty refuted the prophecies of these pessimists. It demonstrated that our statesmen are not bankrupt in vision, patriotism, or diplomacy. It has once again proven that there is always a way out if patience, persistence, tact, coupled with determination, and a will to succeed is in evidence.

To Premier Ramsey MacDonald belongs the chief credit for this great achievement. He refused at all times to recognize the possibility of failure. When the probability of getting France and Germany to agree seemed next to none, when consultation followed consultation without results, Ramsey MacDonald kept up the good fight until finally he succeeded in bringing these two historic enemies together. Justly deserved were the warm congratulations extended to him by King George. The whole world owes him a debt of gratitude. He has resolved centuries in a succession of generations throughout the world, and has thereby paved the way for further successes at future conferences.

Besides wiping out the war reparations of $5,000,000,000 which Germany was obligated to pay, and replacing that sum with a lump sum of $500,000,000 to be paid when Germany can feel bonds for that amount, the Locarno treaty declares abrogation of collection and payment of inter-debt war debts for fifteen years. Austria and Germany, and the Danubian states which are in financial difficulties and whose prosperity is closely linked with that of Germany, it creates a committee to study the grain problem in the Danubian states which are endangered by a huge surplus; and it creates machinery for a world economic conference under the auspices of the League of Nations, in which all nations, including the United States, will participate.

The Locarno conference did not accomplish everything that some people hoped of it, but it did succeed in ranking transatlantic strides along the road to world betterment and a restoration of conditions which it is essential that be restored before there can be a return to world confidence, world trade, world prosperity. Had that conference ended in failure, the outlook would have been dark indeed, whereas the large measure of success achieved not only means an immediate betterment, but makes possible the further coming together of the nations in a better, more hopeful, more friendly spirit to consider other problems, such as disarmament, tariff barriers, international currency problems, and allied subjects.

The world outlook is distinctly better because Ramsey MacDonald stuck to his principles and unflinchingly fought for a return to reason and world brotherhood at Locarno.

Power Of Advertising

One Of the Indispensable Tools To The World In Reconstruction Of Industry

Advertising is one of the indispensable tools to be used in the reconstruction of North American industry, was the keynote of an address to the convention of the Pacific Advertising Club Association, at Vancouver, by George W. Kluge, of San Francisco. "Advertising," he declared, "is a powerful instrument which should be used with the greatest skill and care in order that the returning may be secured and lasting ones the optimum line begun."

"With the change in the situation from one where anything could be sold that could be manufactured, to one where anything can be manufactured that can be sold, the opportunity exists for a genuine democracy of the results that can be obtained through powerful advertising, intelligently done."

"What," he said, "should be done on behalf of mercantile pursuits directly and to a limited extent, the opportunity exists for a genuine democracy of the results that can be obtained through powerful advertising, intelligently done."

Vaccine For Tuberculosis

Discovery May Mean Final Control Of Dread Disease

In a copyright story, the Milwaukee Sentinel and 29 years of research by Dr. William D. Frost, agricultural bacteriologist at the University of Wisconsin, have been rewarded by discovery of a vaccine "tuberculin," which ultimately may bring partial control of tuberculosis.

The vaccine is obtained from isolated tubercle bacilli treated by ultraviolet rays.

"The rays," the paper said, "effectively kill the germs of tuberculosis, but apparently preserve the chemical change in their scientific bodies of toxins" and from the ray-treated bacilli the doctor obtained a vaccine which was physically harmless, yet potent enough to combat live bacilli.

Economic Conditions Of Profession Being Lowered, It Is Stated
Too many physicians are being turned out in Canada with the result the economic condition of the medical profession is being lowered, declared Dr. J. M. MacLennan, Victoria, in addressing the Ontario College of Physicians and Surgeons Council at Toronto.

Dr. W. Peaslee, Wolfe Island, had pointed out 223 students went up for the Dominion council examination and only five were "plucked" and 49 others "referred" because they failed in one or two subjects.

Tree Planting On Prairies Sole Remedy For Soil Drifting And The Conservation Of Moisture

Extensive tree planting alone can save Saskatchewan from the fate which has overtaken the Sahara desert, according to Capt. Richard St. Barbe Baker, who passed through Winnipeg, on his way from the Peace River country to Toronto. As late as the time of Mohammet, Capt. Baker said, the Sahara was a well-wooded and fertile area. Then came a great influx of Arabs who, like the settlers of the western plains, cut down the trees and began farming operations. The result was to convert the once rich African plains into an arid and unsettled tract, unfit for human habitation.

One of the first hundred students to attend the University of Saskatchewan before the war, Capt. Baker is evidently encouraged growth. But in Saskatchewan he noted the serious denuding of the plains, and based his prediction for the future upon his study of the past.

Tree planting on all rising ground, Capt. Baker declared, was the sole remedy for this state of affairs, which was resulting in a changed climate, soil drifting and desiccation. He urged upon Western Canada the adoption of the policy in force in New Zealand, where forestry was being made to pay.

In that country one private company had already sold $4,000,000 of "forest bonds." The money was invested in tree-planting, and it was believed that in 12 years from the time of planting, definite return on the investment could be expected. In the interval the trees did much to conserve moisture and climatic conditions. "Plant a tree and grow money" was the New Zealand slogan.

Capt. Baker said it was deplorable to see settlers in the Peace River country burning off the trees on their farms. This left an alkali deposit which was injurious to the soil. Instead, he advocated the construction of a plant for distilling alcohol from the trees felled, saying this would in time make Canada self-supporting in motor fuel. A new entrepreneur was being perfected in France which could use the gas generated by burning charcoal (made of wood). The policy of tree planting was, therefore, in his opinion, not only good agricultural insurance, but also a policy that paid actual dividends.

Capt. Baker is the founder of a society named "The Men of the Trees," headed in England by Sir Francis Younghusband, its aim being the protection and encouragement of forest growth. He is also an author and forestry expert, having recently been in equatorial Africa employed by the British Government. Winnipeg Free Press.

Serious Hail Losses

Heavy Damage Suffered By Farmers In Southern Saskatchewan

Hail losses in southern Saskatchewan are very serious, according to insurance officials at Regina. Heavy damage has been suffered in districts where farmers have not been able to afford insurance.

According to C. C. Cook, president of the Farmers Mutual Hail Insurance Company, claims this year have not been numerous but those which have been received are large.

Seven claims ranging up to 100 per cent, had been received from the district between Pasqua and Moose Jaw following a hail storm in that district. E. G. Hingley, secretary of the Saskatchewan Municipal Hail Association, said:

361 UNDOUBTED SLIMMING LINES AND CHIC

Suitable for normal as well as larger figures. Seldom is a dress so smart and so slenderizing at the same time. It has a subtle air of youth. It's the fascinating one-sided rever collar that bows at the opposite shoulder that does it.

In the original dress of black and white crepe silk print, the rever collar was of white crepe silk. The vest, belt and buttons were also of the white crepe. The scalloped outline at the lower of the rever is particularly modern and minimizes bodice breadth.

This dress in plain navy blue crinkle crepe silk with white trim is most effective. Style No. 361 is designed in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48 inches bust. Size 36 requires 3 1/2 yards of 38-inch material with 5/8 yard of 38-inch contrasting.

Batiste prints, sheer linen, tweed, sportswear linen and tub silks are smart for summer wear.

Price of pattern 25 cents in stamps or coin (coin is preferred). Wrap coin carefully.

Echo Of The War

Lloyd George Not Impressed With Value Of The American Forces

Newton D. Baker, President Wilson's secretary of war, has revealed that David Lloyd George, then Premier of Great Britain at the time apparently desired the removal of General John J. Pershing as commander-in-chief of the American Expeditionary Force in the Great War.

In a letter to Colonel Lloyd C. Griscom, former liaison officer between General Pershing and the British War Office, Mr. Baker wrote that the war-time premier complained the United States army was "perfectly useless" to the British forces and was on the verge of asking for General Pershing's recall.

At the conclusion of a dinner in London in 1918, Mr. Baker wrote, Mr. Lloyd George "with vehement emphasis, complained that the United States army in France was of no service to the British at all in spite of the fact that Great Britain had stripped necessary empire services of ships in order to carry United States troops to France, and that they had scarcely gotten to France before General Pershing pulled them away from the British and took them into his own custody on another part of the line."

"This description was most earnest and vehement, reaching in the final declaration of Lloyd George that so far as Great Britain was concerned the American army was perfectly useless and the ship service devoted to bringing them over wasted."

Mr. Baker replied that from his own observation on the front lines he was convinced that the American troops were "at least detaining that many German divisions which might otherwise be added to the concentration against the French and British."

He countered with an offer to discontinue the transportation of American soldiers on British ships and move only such forces as could be carried on American vessels.

The next morning, Mr. Baker recalled, Lord Reading, former viceroy to India, said that Mr. Lloyd George "asked me to say to you that you should think no more about the matter which he raised for discussion last night at dinner."

Helpful Evidence

A critical moment in a court case had arrived.

Counsel for defence rose and pointed his finger at the man in the witness box.

"Now, sir," he commenced, "the whole evidence hangs on the destroyed letter. Think before you answer. What did the postmark say?"

The witness went through the action of deep thought.

"I remember," he said at last. "The postmark said: Every home needs a telephone."

Songs Of Yesterday

Old Favorites Have Strong Appeal In This Modern Age

It used to be theory of those who construct radio programs that music composed farther back than the day before yesterday was old-fashioned and unsuited to the demands of an up-and-coming age. Now the program magnates are less sure of themselves and of the public taste.

The directors of a feature called "Today and Yesterday," offered by a New York station, invited their audience to specify their favorite music. Six thousand replies were received, 614 songs were suggested, and first choice, with 513 ballots was none other than our old friend, "Silver Threads Among the Gold," written 60 years ago and enjoyed by every generation since that time.

Of the seven songs receiving the largest number of votes five were old and only one was really new. Second place was won by the fine old ballad, "When you and I Were Young, Maggie," which was written in 1810. "Paradise," a melody of 1830, was third in the voting; fourth was "Old Man River," composed five years ago; and then came "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," written in 1910; Chauncy Goss's "Wild Irish Rose" which dates back to 1890, and Currier Jacob Bond's "Perfect Day." In the other 607 songs mentioned, the old and tried favorites predominated, we are told, among the younger members of the "unseen audience" as well as representatives of the older generation.

Broadcasting stations which have taken a poll of preferences in the matter of instrumental music had similar experiences. They have found a great fondness for the music which everybody knows. Whether this tendency indicates anything in particular we shall not attempt to say. Perhaps, at any rate, it has had something to do with ridding the air of the race of crooners, and for that we should be truly grateful.—Ottawa Journal

KING'S GRANDSON TRIES HIS LUCK

Hon. Gerald Lascelles, son of the Princess Royal and grandson of King George, was caught by the camera as he tried his luck at the Marlborough House Garden Party. He is fishing for prizes in the "pond" and must land a tin fish with his magnetic hook to be in the money.

Science is ever amazing the individual. No sooner does one marvel at a contrivance beside its successor, until it would seem that the world could be surprised no more. Yet science must have many more miracles up her sleeve. One has just been revealed in London that appears to be a virtual revolution in photographic art. It is nothing more or less than the photography of the invisible. A camera was set up in Old Park, Dover, and despite the fact that haze had the French coast from a view, the printed picture showed a vast range of that coast in extraordinary detail.

The importance of this achievement in photography can hardly be overestimated. It simply means that whereas the photographer has hitherto been at the mercy of the weather, he can now disregard both rain, mist and haze, and go ahead with his work as though they did not exist. The new system enables the camera to penetrate both mist and haze and to photograph distant objects and scenes which the actual distances of the atmosphere prevents the photographer from seeing with his own eyes, with as much detail as though the atmosphere were absolutely clear.

The explanation of the new process is so simple that even the unskilled layman can grasp it easily. One reason why we cannot see far in misty or hazy weather is because the light is scattered, or diffused, by the humidity in the atmosphere. It is also scattered on a fine day, but red light is scattered less than blue and the problem has been to use the infra-red light in the atmosphere and to exclude all other light. This has been accomplished by using a piece of dyed gelatine in front of the camera lens as a filter. This permits the longer rays alone to penetrate and to carry the image to be photographed with them. This infra-red light is invisible to the naked eye, but infra-red sensitive plates are responsive to it, and by their use and the use of the filter photographs can be taken with a telephoto camera of scenes which the naked eye cannot see.

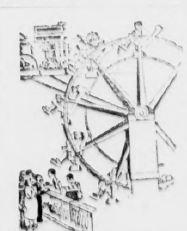

What fascinating vistas are thus made possible to the photographer may easily be imagined. A new art has in effect been created by this simple invention which achieves so marvellous a result. Its bearing in other fields than those of art is easy to indicate. It may, for instance, play a highly important part in aerial photography, and also in pictures taken for defence purposes. More thoroughly exercised control of aerial photography is likely to follow as a natural corollary. But in so far as the art of photography is concerned, he now has a new resource from which he may draw hitherto undimagined beauties for the decoration of those who love nature in all its forms.—Montreal Star.

Contract Bridge

By Hamlin B. Hatch, Olympic Champion, Cavendish Club, Toronto

The Responding Hand. Partnership, and all the word implies, is the fundamental factor in successful contract playing. And it is in the response between partners that the precise truthful facts about the combined hands are conveyed to the respective partners. This can be done quite accurately provided there is no interference bidding. The purpose of this article is to show methods of correct response bidding predicated on the assumption that there is no interference bidding.

The original bidder opens the bidding with a bid of one. This bid immediately tells the partner of the bidder, that the bidding hand contains at least three or four high cards, and that the original bidder thinks that these high cards, under average conditions, will take from two to three tricks against any bid the opponents may make. The bid also says, that in the declared suit, the bidder guarantees that he will take a minimum of four to five tricks, provided the deal is played in the original bid suit. Normal expectancy in the responding hand is three taking tricks in the declared suit. The responding hand then, with three or less taking tricks in the original declared suit, must deny the original bid by either a pass or another declaration. It must be firmly fixed in the mind of the player that it is on the contract of the first response that the success or failure of the particular deal is based. And that also the function of the responding hand, is to bear the brunt of the bidding.

The responding hand has four bidding possibilities provided there is no adverse bid. These are the raise, the pass, the takeout and the jump-shift or forcing bid.

The Raise. If it is decided to raise partner's suit, then the full raise should be given immediately. And the full raise is that number of taking tricks above the normal expectancy of three, that the hand contains. If one heart is the original declaration and the responding hand will take five tricks with hearts trumps, and has normal length in hearts, the bid of the responding hand must be three hearts.

The Pass. If the responding hand contains no raise, no biddable suit, and less than one honor trick, the correct bid is pass. Hands which are freakish in distribution are exceptions. Freak hands may be bid with less than an honor trick.

The Takeout. This is a bid in another suit or no trump. It must, in the early stages of the bidding, be construed by the original bidder as a denial of the original bid. In effect it may not be a denial as the responding hand may have more than normal expectancy in the original bid, but may have a powerful suit of its own. In many cases the takeout is made to find out if the hand "fits." If the two hands can support each other's bids, the hand does fit and high contracts can usually be made.

A second takeout of the original bid is a definite denial and tells partner it is best not to play the hand in the original declaration unless the original bidder's hand is exceptionally strong in the suit bid.

The Forcing Takeout is never a denial of partner's bid. In other words a forcing response should not be made as a rule, unless the forcing bidder has at least neutral support in the original declaration. By neutral support is meant two trumps at least. However a forcing takeout may be made without even neutral support in the original bid, when the forcing bidder's suit is so strong, that, irrespective of his partner's holding in the forcing suit bid, the hand will be strong in the forcing suit. It must be remembered that the forcing takeout is a definite game guarantee bid and, that, after a forcing bid is made the contracting must be continued until a game contract is arrived at.

The One No Trump takeout is the only weakness bid in contract in the first round of bidding. All other takeouts or bids, with the exception of the pass, are strength calls and contain definite high card information to partner. Generally the one no trump takeout is made when the responding hand has no biddable suit and only from one to two high cards, and sometimes not even one. The bid warns partner that there is no game

SETTLE 'N ALL

Diminutive Mary Aitken photographed atop her gigantic suitcase along with her highland dail and pet kettle. Recently four hundred members of the Natives of Glasgow Re-Union Party from the western provinces marshalled at Winnipeg and departed for decade at Montreal to board a special Canadian Pacific train. Aboard the "Duchess of Bedford" the party will be augmented by an additional eight hundred hardy Scots—all homeward bound. Mary is travelling with them from Vancouver to Kilmorie, Ayrshire—and the kettle goes along too!

In the hand, unless the original bidder has a very powerful hand, it suggests strongly that for this particular deal, the partnership must be satisfied with a partial score. Usually the no trump takeout places at least one high card in the no trump bidder's hand, but occasionally this no trump takeout should be made on a trickless hand. In other words the good player uses the one no trump takeout, whenever there is even a remote chance to better the bid, and to get into a bid which suits both hands better than the original bid. The following is an example. Original bid is one heart. Partner holds six spades to the ten spot, a singleton heart, three little diamonds and three little clubs. Partner bids one no trump, and on second round of bidding bids two spades. The hand is trickless with hearts trumps but with spades trumps will take three tricks. Original bidder, after the one no trump and the subsequent two spade bid must pass unless exceptionally strong.

New York's Leaning Tower

Unlike Wonder At Pisa It Leans Different Ways

Perhaps few people know it, but New York City has its own "Leaning Tower," the new H. L. Doberty Building, but far from being like the world wonder at Pisa, New York's tower leans sometimes one way, and sometimes another. When first told that it was leaning toward the north, engineers suspected an optical illusion, but accurate tests showed that the tower leaned to the south. To settle the question another test was made next day, and it was found that the tower leaned toward the west. It was finally discovered that the heat of the sun expanded the metal on one side or another, causing a variation of four inches at the top.

Roosevelt the Man

Brief Sketch of the Democratic Presidential Nominee

The honorable and gallant gentleman, as British M.P.'s are called by their fellows, seemed the right phrase for Franklin D. Roosevelt as he stood before the Democratic convention in Chicago and accepted its nomination for president.

To one seeing him for the first time the degree of his physical infirmity, though he has made immense gains since stricken by infantile paralysis eleven years ago, was startling. He walked with painful slowness to the dais, one hand on a stout cane and the other in the arm of his towering son, James.

He had flown from New York on a rough day and this, as air travel is still comparatively uncommon in the United States, appeared to most of the delegates a highly venturesome thing to do. As he gripped the desk with both hands before speaking, he appeared to be overcoming fatigue with difficulty.

Once he was launched on his speech there was no thought of that. The governor is well over six feet tall, strongly built and appears to have lost his lameness, in vibrant health. He spoke fast and vigorously.

As a speaker he falls just short of arousing enthusiasm. Considerably more magnetic than President Hoover on the platform, he is too reserved and chooses his words too carefully to stir the passionate response that Theodore Roosevelt could obtain.

The Chicago citizens in the galleries began to leave the hall in numbers after a few minutes, but the delegates on the floor were sympathetic and latent. The unearthly glare of the Klieg lights and the crash and flash of the press cameras gave the whole scene a theatrical air.

The governor spoke earnestly and with few gestures, but his face was animated and its grave lines became firmer as he made a point. Now and again his heavy-lidded eyes flashed and he raised his arm in a final greeting he was given perhaps the most spontaneous ovation of the six-day party session.

Something New In Dentistry

Stainless Steel Now Being Used In Place Of Gold

Something new in dentistry—the use of stainless steel in plates and other appliances—will be described at the joint convention of the British, Canadian and Ontario Dental Associations to be held in Toronto during August. The world has long been accustomed to steel in bridges, and now it is being used in dental bridges as well.

Originally developed in Germany, much work on the use of stainless steel to replace gold and other precious metals in the construction of plates, clasps, bands and other dental appliances has been done in Great Britain.

Some work has been done in Canada, according to members of the faculty of dentistry at the University of Toronto, but the time has not yet come when every dentist is prepared for this new type of treatment.

Shrinkage In Revenue

Americans Pay Millions Less In Corporation and Income Taxes

Americans paid $803,161,167.36 less in corporation and income taxes during the fiscal year just ended than in the year before, the Bureau of Internal Revenue reported.

This shrinkage in revenue and the increased government expenditures resulted in the greatest peace-time treasury deficit in the history of the country. It necessitated passage of a billion dollar tax bill and another measure designed to save $150,000,000 in government expenses. The deficit was officially placed at $2,885,000,000.

New War Toy

Great Britain Produces Super Machine Gun With Great Possibilities

Great Britain has a new war toy than can shoot faster than anything on record. It is not much heavier than the ordinary service rifle, but it is really a super machine gun firing 1,100 rounds of ammunition a minute. What is more, it is said to be easy to operate, hard to jam and, as equally important in these times, inexpensive. Use in this rapid firing piece Germany's new bullets, which have double the velocity of those now obtainable and will penetrate half-inch chrome-nickel armor as well as five-eighths inch armor plate, and war will be even worse than Sherman said it was.—The Pathfinder.

NEW INVENTION DOES AWAY WITH COOKING ODORS

Even fish and cauliflower bow down to Canapar Cookery Parchment

BETTER, CHEAPER AND EASIER COOKING

Delicious as cauliflower, cabbage and certain other vegetables are, they have imposed a heavy penalty on people who fearlessly cooked them. Not to mention those who had to suffer the odor without enjoying the finished product. The same thing is equally true of fish.

Canapar Cookery Parchment, a very ingenious invention, does away with this annoyance entirely. While sealing in odors, it also retains flavor and food value. Cooking in Canapar actually parallels the famous French method of steaming and confounding food and its base.

You buy Canapar in a large envelope of handy-size sheets which may be rinsed out and used over and over again because they won't absorb odors. When boiling vegetables you simply wet the Canapar and make a bag of it, tie it to a pushing bag. If you steam them, you line the steamer with Canapar, arrange food and seasonings and fold back corners of the Canapar to prevent steam from dripping back. You can actually cook three vegetables at once in the same steamer, this way—save fuel—and the flavors will not intermingle.

Steamed, or boiled, fish comes out firm, solid and swimming in its own juice. No odors. No sticky steamer or soupçon to clean up afterwards.

Line your steaming pan with Canapar, then the fats and juices can't burn. Meat is more succulent and there is no scorching or scragging of the pan afterwards.

Many women use Canapar for a dishcloth—it is so silky and satisfactory, and doesn't spread lint.

You'll never be without Canapar once you start using it. It saves time and money. Made by the makers of the famous PARASANI Heavy Waxed Paper in the Green Box.

Special Offer

Most grocery, drug and department stores sell Canapar, but if yours doesn't, just send the coupon and we'll give you a free Canapar book entitled "The Fisherman's containing one hundred recipes as a bonus for your trouble.

Remedy for Destroying Beet and Webworms

We have received the following information for the destruction of beet and webworms (army worms):
Sprinkle the tops of vegetable plants, flowers, vines, etc. with flour overnight, while there is a dew. During the day the pests will crawl over the flour, immersing themselves in same. The heat of the sun will then bake the flour, thus killing the pests.
